

I am very much opposed to the weakening of Indiana's telephone privacy law. We have fought long and hard the that law and to have it weakened is an invasion of my privacy. I am contacting each of the banks that I do business with and let them know my dissatisfaction of their challenge to the Indiana telephone privacy law. As a citizen to the state of Indiana, I value my privacy just as I'm sure you don. I do not want more than 800,000,000 phone calls that could come to me in an eighteen month period if this law were weakened to include "established business relationships." Were is it all to end? How do you personally like getting "unwanted" phone calls during your family time?
